

The Kootenay-Boundary Regional Consortium Presents: Re-Imagining Learning using Collaborative Tools with November Learning Associate Julia Leong

First timers: August 23, Prestige Resort: Cranbrook
Advanced concepts: August 24, Prestige Resort: Nelson

Technology is changing how we think about learning and teaching. Employers are looking for creativity, differentiation by design, and collaborative colleagues. Collaboration requires a cohesive vision, new attitudes, and support to achieve school goals. We will explore collaboration tools, discuss why they are significant, how students are using them, their strengths and drawbacks, and implications for teaching and learning. The tools we will look at include:

- Web-based word processing that allows people to work together in really real-time
- Screen casting to record activities on the computer screen for playback later. The captured videos can be used for tutorials, peer training, and evaluating
- Cloud computing - Google Apps
- Social networking - online communities of people who share interests, or who are interested in exploring the interests and activities of others.

A computer lab will be provided at each site to allow attendees to get a full, hands-on experience in a comfortable setting.

Julia Leong is a technology integration specialist who fosters teacher professional development programs. She inspires technology infused learning that engages teachers to examine their practice and to encourage students to demonstrate knowledge in multimodal ways. Julia's sessions are highly creative and designed to make you question and reflect how your role as a teacher changes with technology, and leave inspired to teach and learn in new ways.
